TRUST LEGISLATION

Democratic Senate Leaders Not Sure of Action Before Adjournment.

The situation regarding trust legisla tion at the present session of Congress still continues uncertain. Notwithstanding reports from the White House that the President is determined that some trust legislation must be placed on the statute books before Congress adjourns that such legislation will be enacted before adjournment. Senator Kern, democratic leader of the Senate, when asked today whether trust legislation would be had, replied: "I am not prepared to answer that question just now." He added, however, that he thought that if it was found pos 1. Congress might remain here and put it through. There are, however, a number of senators who will insist upon trust legislation it the present session, no matter how late they have to remain in Washington to obtain it. They believe that it would be a political blunder not to enact the legislation which the country has been told would be forthcoming before ad-journment, and upon which business is waiting.

The Senate interstate commerce committee is to meet tomorrow morning to consider feporting to the Senate the trade commission bill drafted by a subcommittee. It is not at all unlikely that the committee will vote to report the measure to the Senate without further waiting upon the House for the House trust lills. Many members of the committee rie determined there shall be trust legislation at the present session.

We should provide bounteously for them. Let them take away with them happy thoughts and remembrances of the fleeting hours of their closing days.
